Sedition case registered against Zain Shah, 60 other activists

Dawn Report

HYDERABAD/DADU: A sedition and rioting case was registered against Syed Zain Shah, the Vice President of the Tehreek Tahafuz Ayeen-i-Pakistan (TTAP), and 60 others, on Sunday in the wake of the events held in Sann a day earlier to celebrate 122nd birth anniversary of veteran Sindhi nationalist leader G.M. Syed.

The others named in the case included Sindh United Party (SUP) Secretary General Roshan Buriro, Jeay Sindh Qaumi Mahaz-Bashir chief Sannan Qureshi, Jeay Sindh Mahaz-R founder Riaz Ali Chandio, JSQM-Shaheed Bashir leader Dr Niaz Kalani and proactive activists Sarang Joyo, Taj Joyo, Inam Abbasi, Saima Muzaffar Bhutto, Aslam Khashkheli, Sikandar Sudro, Saeed Tunio, Hamid Bhutto, Majid Sindhi, Lala Aslam Pathan and Ayesha Sargani.

The FIR was lodged by ASI Badruddin Kalhoro at the Chhachhar police station of Sann on behalf of the state.

The complainant claimed that the [45 nominated and 15 unknown] suspects raised slogans against the sovereignty and integrity of Pakistan in Sann on Saturday. He also claimed that they damaged vehicles and blocked roads while resorting to rioting.

The suspects were booked under Sections 123-A, 124-A, 153-A, 341, 147, 148 and 149 of the Pakistan Penal Code (PPC) and Section 6/7 of the Anti-Terrorism Act (ATA).

TTAP wants Constitution restored in actual shape: Achakzai

NA opposition leader meets QAT's Ayaz Latif Palijo in Hyderabad

By Our Staff Correspondent

HYDERABAD: Chief of Tehreek Tahafuz Ayeen-i-Pakistan (TTAP) and Leader of the Opposition in the National Assembly Mahmood Khan Achakzai has proposed formation of a five-party national government to hold transparent elections within four months.

He was speaking to journalists after meeting Qaumi Awami Tehreek leader Ayaz Latif Palijo at his residence here on Saturday night. TTAP leader Allama Raja Nasir Abbas, Asad Qaiser and others were also present.

He said TTAP believes that the Constitution should be restored in its actual shape and parliamentary supremacy was ensured and nations' right over their resources should be respected. He said that this formula should be accepted and anyone could become prime minister.

He recalled that he had refused to become part of the PML-N government in 2013 and got Dr Abdul Malik Baloch elected as Balochistan chief minister while his party's nominee became the governor. He said that he had never been interested in power.

Talking about his cordial relations with former prime minister Nawaz Sharif and President Asif Zardari, he in a lighter vein said he only owes them a cup of tea. "They both can be hosted with tea and biscuits by me," he said.

He said TTAP had given a strike call for February 8 and if it didn't make any difference then a phase-wise protest movement would be launched.

He proposed that five major parties should form a national government to hold transparent elections in four months and winning side should be given power.

Mr Achakzai added that all issues affecting the country could only be addressed after addressing grievances of the provinces.

He stated that the judiciary and media had been controlled through 26th and 27th amendments. He said that TTAP was standing with people and farmers of Sindh.

He said that elections in the country were stolen and TTAP was now fighting for the masses. He said TTAP would knock at every door because the entire country was facing price hike, unemployment, poverty and lawlessness.

He said that TTAP leadership exchanged views with Mr Palijo on how to ensure interprovincial harmony and to promote national unity.

Pakistan Tehreek-i-Insaf leader Asad Qaiser said that judiciary has lost its independence and Pakistan was faced with countless problems.

He said that road infrastructure was in a bad shape in Karachi. He alleged people in Sindh don't have access to clean drinking water but Bilawal Bhutto-Zardari gave a three-hour-long presentation to portray that everything was fine.

Mr Qaiser also complained that provinces were not getting their due share under the National Finance Commission Award. He said that only justice, law and Constitution could keep the country united. He said the Feb 8 strike would be successful against the stolen mandate.

Allama Raja Nasir Abbas told journalists the present parliament doesn't represent the true mandate of people. He said that bad governance in the country was the main cause of economic instability.

He said it was discussed in the sitting that issue of provincial autonomy would be raised. He said TTAP leaders want supremacy of Constitution and real democracy.

Mr Palijo welcomed TTAP leaders and said that the Indus river, parliament, Constitution and judiciary connect provinces.

He said that there was a crisis of governance and constitutional supremacy in the country. He added that true federation could resolve the problems and curbs could not address them.

He said that Sindh's survival was directly linked with the Indus river. He said if the Constitution was harmed then it would be detrimental for people. He alleged Sindh had been handed over to land mafia.

He demanded an end to usurpation of Sindh's water resources in the name of Green Pakistan initiative. He demanded release of all political prisoners.

Remains of defensive wall discovered at Mohenjo-Daro: US expert

By Our Correspondent

LARKANA: During the current excavation at Mohenjo-Daro, clear remains of a defensive wall have been uncovered, along with a large number of pottery fragments.

This was stated by American excavation expert Mark Kenoyer at a detailed briefing held the other day on the ongoing excavation work at the historic site.

The briefing was held at the site when a team of experts from the Technical Consultative Committee (TCC) of National Fund for Mohenjo-Daro (NFM) met after two years to review the ongoing excavation being carried out in the west of the stupa under the supervision of Mr Kenoyer. The meeting was chaired by the committee's chairman Dr Kaleemullah Lashari.

The American excavation expert informed the meeting that during excavations in 1950, foreign expert Sir Mortimer Wheeler had discovered traces of an ancient defensive wall near the Great Bath on the western side of the stupa. Excavation work has now been restarted at the same location by his team.

He further stated that excavation would be carried out on all four sides of Mohenjo Daro in order to fully expose that ancient defensive wall. He claimed that the defensive wall uncovered during the excavation predated Mohenjo-Daro by 800 years. However, local experts have expressed reservations over the claim.

The meeting was attended by Director General Archaeology and Antiquities Abdul Fattah Shaikh, archaeologists Ghulam Mustafa Shar and Altaf Aseem, curator Ehsan Ali Abbasi and architect Naveed Ahmed Sangah.

Agonising wait for loved ones lost in smoke and stampede floor. "We are all shopkeepers from this area who happen to be on the same WhatsApp group," Mohammed Ramzan told Dawn. "Many in the group sent out their final messages. One, Sarfaraz Lachoo, even asked for forgiveness from everyone if he unknowingly ever hurt anyone's feelings. Others, too, sent similar messages," he shared. His own cousin, Faisal, though had not shared anything in the group but called him personally to inform that a terrible fire had broken out in Gul Plaza.

Abid there was looking for his brother Asif, who he said was still inside. Mohammad Waheed was missing nephew Naveed Shahzad who worked at a picture frames shop on the first floor along with two other young men named Hassan Ali and Aamir. A survivor, Hamza Ali, who worked in the same shop as Naveed, Hassan and Aamir, said that while his other colleagues closed their shop doors to keep the smoke out, he along with Aamir decided to get out.

"It was very dark because of the smoke and complete chaos all over. We found many women and children unconscious on the floor. We were familiar with the building passages as we worked there. There is a small mosque on our floor and we escaped through its washroom," said Hamza. "I had inhaled too much smoke and was taken to hospital but Aamir, after realising that he had found a safe way to get out, went back inside to rescue others from the same way we made it out. He was able to bring outside to safety five children he had encountered while coming out. Then he went back in again to help others. Now I find that he lost his life while saving others," he said.

Mohammad Yousuf there was looking for four missing family members, one of whom was Sarfaraz who had sent the farewell message in the WhatsApp group earlier. He also had with him two young boys of 15 years to 18 years.

One woman was looking for her colleagues, two salesgirls from a basement women's undergarments shop, who were also among the missing, feared dead. "It's the second day with no sign of them. I am losing hope," she said with tears in her eyes.

Another girl, Maham, who worked in an abaya shop in the basement was also missing, with little hope of having survived.

There was also slim hope left in Umair's heart as he silently stood at the site speaking on the phone to his sister whose husband Ramzan was still said to be inside. "He worked in a crockery shop on the mezzanine floor but could not get out," he said. "The entire shop's staff of four, led by the shop's owner, formed a chain by holding each other's hands as they stepped out in the smoky corridors. All, except my brother-in-law, made it. The one holding his hand said he lost his grip during the stampede and could not find him in the smoke," he said. "My sister and their two young children are still praying that he survived. But they are following the news on TV and social media too. They also know in their hearts," he said with a lump forming in his throat.

Mrs Aslam, an aunt sitting outside a small white tent facing whatever was left of Gul Plaza, was grateful to the Almighty to have spared one nephew, her sister's son, while another nephew, her brother's son, was missing. "Annas Imran is my brother's son. He ran a toy shop on the third floor with his cousin and my sister's son Danish Feroz," she said. "Annas is still inside. He had called his father last night after the fire to tell him that he could not breathe, and that was it. We could not get in touch with him again despite many attempts," she cried.

Meanwhile, Danish, the surviving nephew, told Dawn that he jumped out of Gul Plaza to save himself. "From the third floor, I jumped on to the parking lot of Rimpa Plaza next door at around 11pm," he shared.

A father, Mohammed Shakil, said that his 17-year-old son Fahad, who worked in a jewellery shop there, was helped out by his colleagues. "Some people still have a presence of mind, which they use to help themselves and others. But, sadly, most people also panic in situations like these," said the father.

Panic was also seen among the people with loved ones inside. Understandably, they were not willing to listen to reason and were very critical of the rescue efforts. "We have the Navy here, we have the Rangers. They are capable of fighting battles but here there is a building on fire with so many people trapped inside, and no efforts being made to get them out," said one person representing the shopkeepers and business community there. "We are feeling helpless just standing around doing nothing but watch. And when we try to make our own efforts to go inside, the force is used against us," he said.

A haggler's paradise

The greenish-blue building — a Karachi icon — has long been the destination of choice for middle-class shoppers seeking domestic-use products on wholesale rates. A haggler's paradise, many people prefer it to other, more specialised markets because traders here would stock varieties to satisfy all income groups.

Any household shopping trip, be it carpets you seek or crockery and household electronics, whether you wanted a "first copy" or a "China copy" — if you could find it in Gul Plaza, why go elsewhere?

This is possibly what Kausar Parveen and five other members of her family thought when they made their way to Gul Plaza on Saturday night.

According to family sources in Delhi Colony, the 60-year-old Kausar was accompanied by Irfan (35), Misbah (30), Kiran (27), Ashraf (40) and 14-year-old Maryam. They were supposed to be shopping for a family wedding, scheduled to be held after Eid.

According to family members, they last heard from the six around 10pm, around the time the blaze started. Since then, their phones are non-responsive, and there has been no word about their whereabouts.

A group of men were talking animatedly among themselves, discussing the fire brigade's response.

"The building was so congested, there were definitely no fire safety measures. The people trapped inside never stood a chance."

"Yes, but the government is also responsible for ensuring something, right? I heard that the fire brigade got here after quite some time."

"That's true, if they had been quicker, many lives could have been saved."

"Not just lives, livelihoods."

An employee of one of the shops said that he and his co-workers escaped by breaking the glass of the first floor and jumping down.

"When the fire broke out on the lower floor, the smoke filled the upper floors. Breathing became impossible. We covered our faces with wet cloths, made our way out and jumped. By the grace of God, we made it out alive."

A resident of Nazimabad said his younger brother Naveed was trapped inside with five co-workers.

"We last contacted him at 11:45pm on Saturday," he said, pleading for the government to accelerate the firefighting operation so that the search and rescue operation for their loved ones could begin sooner.

Similarly, there were dozens of people searching for their loved ones and waiting for the fire to be extinguished and rescue operations to begin.
